STANDA

FROM THE ARABIC.-BY RICHARD S. EVANS. Not one alone employs my care, I love them all, the witching fair, Adorned with art's enchanted power, Or simple nature's rustic flower; The timid look, the gentle sigh, Or the fierce mien, and cruel eye, When near the hostile tents arise, The female taunts and threatening cries. Their foibles and their frailties too, Reveal new graces to our view, The fragile casket thus displays, The hidden diamond to the gaze. When night's soft influence reigns on high, 'Tis not to slumber's arms I fly, And when the heats of day invade, Reclined on roses in the shade, The wine cup here to beauty true, Reflects its tints, its sparkling hue, From Leila's cheek, and Zaura's eye, CROWNING THE WISEST.

Its fragrance breathes from Abla's sigh.

Not many years since, a young man from New York visited London. His father being connect-ed with several of the magnates of the British aristocracy, the young gentleman was introduced into the fashionable circles of the metropolis, where, in consequence of his fine personal appearance, or that his father was reported to be very rich, or that he was a new figure on the stage, he attracted much attention, and became quite a favorite with the ladies. This was not at all relished by the British beaux, but as no very fair pretext offered for a rebuff, they were compelled to treat him civilly. Thus matters stood when the Hon. Mr. M. P. and lady made a party to accompany them to Cambridgeshire, and the American was one of the invited guests.

Numerous were the devices to which these devotees of pleasure resorted, in order to kill that old fellow who will measure his hours when he ought to know they are not wanted, and the ingenuity of every one was taxed to remember or invent something novel. The Yankees are proverbially ready for invention, and the American did honor to his character as a man accustomed to freedom of thought. He was frank and gay, and entered into the sports and amusements with that unaffected enjoyment which communicated a part of his fresh feelings to the most worn out fashions of the party. His good nature would have been sneered at, by some of the proud cavaliers, had he not been a capital shot; and he might have been quizzed, had not the ladies, won by his respectful and pleasant civilities, and his constant attention in the drawing-room and saloon, always showed themselves his friends. But a combination was at last formed among a trio of dandies, staunch patrons of the Quarterly, to annihilate the American.

They proposed to vary the eternal evening waltzing and piping, by the acting of charades and various games; having interested one of these indefatigable young ladies who always carry their point in the scheme, it was voted to be the thing. After some few charades had been disposed of,

2 dozen rich handsome Silk Shawls
3 do rich embr'd Mousseline de Laine Shawls

This was played by selecting the judge of the game, and three persons, either ladies or gentlemen, who are to contend for the crown by answering successively the questions which the rest of the party are at liberty to ask. The one who is de clared to be the readiest and happiest in his answers, receives the crown. Our American, much against his inclination, was chosen among the three candidates.

He was aware that his position, and the socie ty with which he was mingling, required of him the ability to sustain himself. He was, to be sure, treated with distinguished attention by his host and hostess, and generally by the party; but this was a favor to the individual—and not one of the company understood the character of republicans or appreciated the republic.

The three worthies had arranged that their turn for him should fall in succession, and he the last. The first one, a perfect exquisite, and with an air of most ineffable condescension, put his question: "If I understand rightly the government of your country you seknowledge and in ment of your country, you acknowledge no dis-tinction of rank; consequently you can have no court standard for the manners of a gentleman.

Will you favor me with the information where your best school for politeness is found?"

"For your benefit," replied the American, smiling calmly, "I would recommend the Falls of Niagara. A contemplation of that supendous wonder teaches humility to the prou and human nothingness to the vainest. It rebukes the trifler, and arouses the most stupid; in short, it turns men from their idols, and when we acknowledge that God is only Lord, we feel that men are our equals."

There was a murmur among the audience; but whether of praise or censure the American could not determine, as he did not choose to betray any anxiety for the result by a scrutiny of the faces which, he knew, were bent upon him. The second now proposed his question. He affected to be a great politician, was mustached and whiskered like a diplomatist, which station he had been coveting. His voice was bland, but his emphasis very significant.

"Should I visit the United States, what subject with which I am conversant, would most There was a murmur among the audience :

ject with which I am conversant, would most interest your people, and give me an opportunity of enjoying their conversation?"

"You must maintain, as you do at present, that a monarchy is the wisces, the purest, the best government which the skill of man ever devised, and that a democracy is utterly barbarous. My countrymen are proverbially fond of argument, and will meet you on both these questions and if you choose a group with you to the tions, and, if you choose, argue with you to the

The murmur was renewed, but still without any decided expression of the feeling with which his answer had been received.

his answer had been received.

The third then rose from his seat, and with an assured voice, which seemed to announce certain triumph, said—

"I require your decision on a delicate question, but the rules of the pastime warrant it, and also a candid answer. You have seen the American and English ladies; which are the fairest?"

fairest?"

The young republican glanced around the circle. It was bright with flashing eyes, and the sweet smile which wreathed many a lovely lip, might have won a less determined patriot from his allegiance. He did not hesitate, though he bowed low to the ladies as he answered:

"The standard of female beauty is, I believe, allowed to be the power of exciting love and admiration in our sex; and consequently those ladies who are most admired and respected by the gentlemen must be the fairest. Now, I assert. confidently, that there is not a nation on sert, confidently, that there is not a nation on earth where woman is so truly beloved, so ten-derly cherished, as in the Republic of the United States. But," said he, and he again bowed low, "if the ladies before whom I now have the honor of expressing my opinion, were in my country, we should think them Americans."

The applause was enthusiastic. After the mirth had subsided, so as to allow the judge to be heard, he directed the crown to be given to the Yankee.

VIRTUOUS MEN. (1) Storing Seprence

VIRTUOUS MEN.

Man is made up of contrarieties. Inclined to friendship from the want he finds in himself of friends, he compassionates the sufferer, he relieves the necessitous, and finds complacency and satisfaction, whether his turn is to receive or confer an obligation. But as one and the same thing may be an object of desire to many, strife, enmity and ill will become thereby unavoidable; benevolence is extinguished by avarice and ambition, and envy fills the heart, which, till then, was all affection! but friendship can make its way, and surmount every obstacle, to unite the just and good; for virtue will teach these to be contented with their own possessions, how moderate soever, nay, infinitely prefer them to the empire of the world, if not to be had without hatred and contention. Assisted by this, they willingly endure the extreme of thirst and hunger, rather than injure or bear hard on any; nor can love itself, even when the most violent, transport them beyond the rules of decency and good order. They are so far from desiring to encroach on the rights of others, they are easily inclined to resign many of their own. If disputes arise, they are soon ac-comodated to the contentment of each party; an-ger never rises so high as to stand in need of reger never rises so high as to stand in need of re-pentance; nor can envy once find admission into the minds of those who live in a mutual commu-nication of their goods, and plead a kind of right in whatever a friend possesses. Hence, there-fore, we may be very sure that virtuous men will not oppose, but assist each other in discharge of the public offices.—Socrates in Xenophon.
